

Editorial

This issue marks a transition in the Editorial Team of the Global Labour Journal.

Rina Agarwala and Jenny Chan have reached the end of their four-year term and have stepped down. The GLJ would like to take this opportunity to offer our sincere thanks to Rina and Jenny for their service to the Journal over the past four years. Both of them were excellent colleagues who were strongly committed to the Global Labour Journal and to the field of Global Labour Studies. Their tireless work has been essential to the vitality of the Journal. While we will miss them, we wish them well in their future endeavours.

Alexander Gallas and Ben Scully will be continuing as GLJ editors. Jörg Nowak and Karin Pampallis will also be carrying on as Book Reviews Editor and Managing Editor respectively.

At this time, we also welcome two new editors, Maria Lorena Cook and Madhumita Dutta. Maria is in the Department of International and Comparative Labor at the School of Industrial and Labor Relations, Cornell University, where she has taught courses on Latin American labour movements and on international migration. Madhumita teaches in the Geography Department at Ohio State University. Prior to joining academia, she was a long-time labour and social justice activist in India.

The new editorial team is committed to continuing and building on the past successes of the Journal. A key to that success lies with the community of scholars and other visitors to our website who read, publish in and engage with the Journal. We thank you for your interest, and we welcome your ongoing input and ideas regarding the Global Labour Journal.