

Call for Proposals – Special Issues

JHAP recently created a position of Editor for Special Issues with the purpose of offering support for first rate thematic collections of articles and encourage collective and collaborative publications in the field. The Editor for Special Issues is tasked to receive and assess proposals and to steward prospective Guest-Editors throughout the process.

Proposals on any topic within the scope of the Journal are welcome and encouraged. JHAP aims to promote research and provide a forum for discussion of the history of analytic philosophy. ‘History’ and ‘analytic’ are understood broadly. JHAP takes the history of analytic philosophy to be part of analytic philosophy. Accordingly, it publishes historical research that interacts with the ongoing concerns of analytic philosophers and with the history of other twentieth century philosophical movements and traditions.

Open Access Policy

JHAP provides immediate open access to its content on the principle that making research freely available to the public supports a greater global exchange of knowledge. No fees are charged to authors for submission or publication of their works.

Length of Issues

JHAP is an online open access publication that offers broad flexibility of format for collections of articles and length of contributions. There are no a priori constraints to the number of essays or the minimum/maximum number of words of each article. This is meant to encourage innovative approach to scholarship as well as flexibility for Guest-Editors.

Submission

Prospective Guest-Editors 2-page proposals describing the theme of the issue and the proposed/confirmed list of contributors is required. The submission form is available here. All submissions will be reviewed by the Editorial Board to assess fit. Each proposal deemed to fall within the scope of the journal will then be reviewed by external referees. Successful proposals will further receive input from the Editor for Special Issues.

Peer-Review of Articles

JHAP will insure that the complete final draft of each special issue is peer-reviewed. Guest-Editors will be responsible for anonymous refereeing of individual articles within their special issue.

Timeline

Guest-Editors will be responsible to deliver their special issue within the time-frame they will have defined, on a case by case basis, in concertation with the Editor for Special Issue. Failure to deliver an issue within the time-frame might result in a cancellation of the project

Support for Guest-Editors

Guest-Editors for special issues will have access to a user-friendly portal that will allow them to manage their project online with the support of state-of-the-art technology. They will also be stewarded through the project by the Editor for Special Issue. The position of Editor for Special Issue was created with the objective of encouraging new project and fostering a better culture around intellectual collaborations. Those are the principles that will be applied in all aspect of the process.

Commissioned Projects

The Editor for Special Issue is also tasked to recruit Guest-Editors for new projects. Recruitment is guided by the principles that are at the core of JHAP's mandate: to encourage and support historical research that interacts with the ongoing concerns of analytic philosophy and with the history of other twentieth century philosophical traditions, and to do so in ways that challenges received views and promotes innovation.
