Contributors

F. A. Rodríguez-Consuegra is Professor of Logic and the Philosophy of Science at the Universidad de Valencia, Spain. His website (www.uv.es/~rodriguf/) shows that his most recent book is a collection of Russell’s papers, Análisis filosófico (1999). Charles Sayward, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Nebraska—Lincoln, has been teaching there since 1963. He and Philip Hugly are currently at work on a book, Arithmetic and Ontology. Audre Jean Brokes is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at St. Joseph’s University. She is primarily interested in epistemology, with papers forthcoming in Disputatio and Pacific Philosophical Quarterly. Nicholas Griffin, Professor of Philosophy at McMaster, is the first Director of the Bertrand Russell Research Centre at McMaster and the new General Editor of the Collected Papers. He expects his next books, Vol. 2 of The Selected Letters of Bertrand Russell (Routledge) and The Cambridge Companion to Russell, to appear next year. Louis Greenspan is Professor Emeritus of Religious Studies at McMaster and a former Director of the Russell Editorial Project. Ray Perkins is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Plymouth State College. He is completing Public Epistles of Peace and Justice: Bertrand Russell’s Letters to the Editor for Open Court. Peter Stone completed his PhD in political science at the University of Rochester this year. His interests include philosophical anarchism and Rawls’ theory of justice; he is Secretary of the Bertrand Russell Society. Stefan Andersson is undertaking a long study of the International War Crimes Tribunal.

The Bertrand Russell Research Centre will formally open on 16 November 2000 with a large exhibition, in the McMaster Museum of Art, entitled “Russell’s Odyssey”, to be accompanied by a colourful keepsake brochure by Carl Spadoni and Sheila Turcon) and a guest lecture by Ray Monk. See Dr. Griffin’s article on plans for the Centre in this issue.

New Books

Uncertain Paths to Freedom: Russia and China, 1919–22 (Routledge), which is Vol. 15 of the Collected Papers, was published in June at £120, US$200 and CDN$300. Bertrand Russell: 1921–1970, the Ghost of Madness (Cape), the second volume of Ray Monk’s biography of Russell, has appeared at £25, with American publication due in March 2001 (Free Press). Ivor Grattan-Guinness’s The Search for Mathematical Roots, 1870–1940 is imminent from Princeton. The Bertrand Russell Peace Foundation has reprinted Russell’s Satan in the Suburbs (Spokesman, 2000). The Web page at www.mcmaster.ca/russdocs/forthnew.htm maintains an up-to-date list of new books in Russell Studies.

*** "Bertrand Russell and the Foundations of Mathematics" is an exhibit of Russelliana running from July to October 2000 in the Ready Division of Archives and Research Collections in the McMaster Library. Dr. Spadoni mounted the exhibit.

*** The count of the records in the BRACERS inventory of Russell's correspondence has been corrected to 63,230, as of October 2000, with about one third to go. A couple of generally useful new queries combine main entry and topic text fields.

*** The 2001 annual meeting will be hosted by the BRRC at McMaster University, on 25-7 May. Those wishing to give papers should write to the Society's President, Dr. Alan Schwerin, Dept. of Political Science and Philosophy, Monmouth University, West Long Branch, NJ 07764.

*** Three BRS members (Stefan Andersson, Nick Griffin and myself) on their way to the annual meeting in New Jersey Pennsylvania stopped near Phoenixville, Pa. Russell had lived in 1940-43 in the countryside nearby, at what was then called Little Datchet Farm. Thanks to local member Chad Trainer, we found the property and the much smaller one across the road where the Russells lived later, and were greeted with remarkable hospitality by the former's current owner. He showed us, for example, the "crystal room", where Russell and his family listened to the war news. The view from the back porch was suitably of "a wide horizon". Next day we toured the Barnes Foundation and were again the recipients of warm hospitality on the part of the Director.

*** Russell-l is a worldwide electronic discussion, news and information service for Russell Studies. To subscribe, visit mailman.mcmaster.ca/mailman/listinfo/russell-l. The archived messages since Russell-l's beginning in 1993 can be searched by subscribers at mailman.mcmaster.ca/mailman/wilmal/russell-l.

*** Russell has a new publisher in the Bertrand Russell Research Centre, and a new Editorial Board to replace the old Board of Consultants. The back issues site has been recreated at www.humanities.mcmaster.ca/russell/jbackissues.htm.