Editor's Notes

J. E. King is Professor of Economics at La Trobe University and editor, A Biographical Dictionary of Australian and New Zealand Economists (2007), co-author (with M. C. Howard of the University of Waterloo) of The Rise of Neoliberalism: a Materialist Interpretation (forthcoming 2008), and author of Nicholas Kaldor (forthcoming 2009). Nicholas Griffin is Director of the Bertrand Russell Research Centre and General Editor of the Collected Papers. He is co-editing for Routledge, with Dale Jacquette, Russell vs. Meinong: the Legacy of "On Denoting". Roma Hutchinson is a graduate in philosophy and art history and an accredited member of the Society of Indexers. Michael Scanlan recently retired from the Philosophy Department at Oregon State University. This is his second review of a 100th anniversary OD collection for Russell. He is currently studying the derivation of order in Russell’s logicism, and he recently discovered Russell letters in the papers of H. M. Sheffer at Harvard. K. E. Garay teaches in McMaster’s Arts and Science Programme and is affiliated with Women’s Studies and the Department of History. Her latest book is The Distaff Gospels (2006, with Madeleine Jeay). Functional in non-philosophical Hungarian, she is working on a study of Elizabeth of Hungary. Richard Henry Schmitt, who wrote his dissertation on the form of the Tractatus, is working on the Wittgenstein–Russell relationship, focusing on the connections between abstract thought and personal and interpersonal matters. Employed administratively at the University of Chicago, he has also translated Frege’s letters to Wittgenstein for The BRS Quarterly. Kirk Willis, Associate Professor History at the University of Georgia, has written on Russell and modern Britain for Russell. His current research is for an essay, “‘So Good a Bad Book’: Russell’s History of Western Philosophy”.

Electronic Russell

Except for the latest four volumes, Russell may now be consulted freely on the Internet. The entire run of the new series to date and the old series (1971–80) is searchable. Go to the Library’s site, http://digitalcommons.mcmaster.ca/russelljournal/. Separate and dual subscriptions available. See the back cover of this issue.

Peace Lectures

2008’s Russell Peace Lectures were given by feminist peace activist Cynthia Cockburn on 3 and 4 March. Titled “Gender as a Driving Force in War”, Dr. Cockburn explored the role of masculinity in the background to war and what women (and men) can do about it. She noted Russell’s support for the empowerment of women.

Russell’s Pro-Fascist Student

much else, mention of a previously unknown book, Half a Life, that discusses Russell: “Russell is a dual personality, both visible simultaneously—on the one hand, another Bloomsburyite; on the other, a crass sentimentalist. As a Bloomsburyite he emerges as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, exponent of the mathematical method in philosophy of his generation: a brilliant, lucid, veritable genius—with a mind like a rapier, flashing, cutting Gordian knots of the most complicated contrivance with an ease that astonishes, invoking that spontaneous, overwhelming applause which is the reward of only the supremest juggler, ballet dancer or singer of bel canto. And the applause is thoroughly deserved…. He is then Bloomsbury in excelis…. When Russell condescends, however, to step down upon earth, he is like a gullible explorer in a strange land. Of human beings he understands nothing; and yet how wretchedly human he becomes! Petty, prejudiced, purblind, perverted, he retains nothing of his other self but his superb eloquence, which for that very reason becomes a weapon of deceit. Strip him of that and he becomes a funny old white-haired, late-Victorian iconoclast, loaded with false and ready-made values.” The author, James Strachey Barnes, was a student of Russell’s at Cambridge in 1914. He defended Russell’s anti-war lectures in The New Witness in 1915–16. Yet he wrote three favourable books on Fascism, in 1928, 1931 and 1937. Russell wasn’t successful with all of his students.

Forthcoming Books

New Books

New books are: Naresh Kumar Ambastha, Bertrand Russell’s Concept of Peace (Classical Publishing), and Thomas Mormann, Bertrand Russell (Beck). Works by Gregory Landini, Rosalind Carey, Erik J. Wielenberg, Henrique Jales Ribeiro and Keith Green, previously mentioned as forthcoming, have all appeared. Watch for reviews here. The comprehensive list of books in Russell Studies at http://russellarchives.mcmaster.ca has been extended back to 1924.

BRACERS

The catalogue of correspondence in the Russell Archives has reached a total of 111,832 records. They’re publicly searchable at http://bracers.mcmaster.ca.

“Russell-l”

Russell-l is a discussion forum managed by Andrew Bone for the benefit of Russell Studies. Visit http://mailman.mcmaster.ca/mailman/listinfo/russell-l. All the messages are searchable.