Editor’s Notes

Gregory Landini is Professor of Philosophy at the University of Iowa and author of a forthcoming book, Russell. Thomas R. Foster is Professor of Philosophy at Ball State University and is researching Bertrand Russell’s ideas on truth. Roma Hutchinson has indexed nine of Russell’s books in this journal. She is a graduate in art history and an accredited member of the Society of Indexers. Irving Anellis is a visiting Research Associate at the Institute for American Thought and the Peirce Edition Project at Indiana–Purdue University at Indianapolis. James Connelly teaches philosophy at Trent University, and he is working on problems in the philosophy of language, history of early analytic philosophy, and the philosophy of Wittgenstein. Stefan Andersson continues to work on his book-length study of the International War Crimes Tribunal. Philip Ebersole is coordinator for Writers and Books of the Greater Rochester Russell Set. Timothy J. Madigan is the author of W. K. Clifford and “The Ethics of Belief” (reviewed in this issue). He teaches philosophy at St. John Fisher College in Rochester, New York, and is a director of the Bertrand Russell Society. Sylvia Nickerson is studying for a PhD in the history of nineteenth-century British mathematics, philosophy of geometry and foundations of mathematics at the Institute for the History and Philosophy of Science and Technology at the University of Toronto.

PM@100

Nicholas Griffin and Bernard Linsky’s conference to mark the centenary of Volume 1 of Principia Mathematica will be held at McMaster on 21–4 May 2010 in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Bertrand Russell Society on 21–3 May. Both conferences have extensive schedules of speakers. The websites are: http://pm100.mcmaster.ca, http://bertie.ccsu.edu/russell2010, and http://russell.mcmaster.ca/brsmeeting.

Peace Symbol

The best book on the history and use of the peace symbol is Barry Miles’ Peace: 50 Years of Protest (Reader’s Digest, 2008).

BR Peace Lecturer

Russell has a prominent part in the book, written by an expert on the counter-culture of the 1960s. Gwynne Dyer gave the 2009 Bertrand Russell Peace Lectures on 9 and 10 November. The lectures, titled “War and Peace in the Middle East” and “Climate Change and the Threat of War”, were well received. Andrew Bone of BRRC was on McMaster Peace Studies’ selection committee for the Russell Peace Lectures.

Russell may be consulted freely on the Internet. Go to the Library’s site, http://digitalcommons.mcmaster.ca/russelljournal/. For online and print subscriptions, see the back cover of this issue.

The annotated catalogue of correspondence in the Russell Archives reached a total of 117,041 records by 31 March 2010. The database is searchable at http://bracers.mcmaster.ca, although since the Russell Centre’s move in July, that address has been restricted to campus and VPN access. The Library has provided some student assistant time for BRACERS. For this 22-year project, the end is in sight—at 123,000 to 125,000 records when it is completed. We can almost see what Russell’s daily delivery of mail brought him, and his dedication to responding to almost all of it.

Russell-l is a discussion forum managed by Andrew Bone for the benefit of Russell Studies. Visit http://mailman.mcmaster.ca/mailman/listinfo/russell-l. All the messages are searchable.
